A SHORT HISTORY OF ROOSEVELT UNIVERSITY

The history of Roosevelt University is in essence the history of an idea -- an idea which did not originate at any one time but which grew up out of centuries of man's struggle for freedom and growth, out of man's longing to develop to his highest capacities to fulfill his destiny.

As man's desire for self-improvement has grown so have educational facilities been born and a measure of a society has been taken from the quality and scope of its educational opportunities. Throughout history barriers to the learning process have been many and stubborn. As each one is penetrated the ideal toward which man strives becomes a greater reality. Roosevelt University is the product of the determination of a group of free men to maintain a free and democratic educational institution.

To be meaningful any history of Roosevelt University must start back in 1936 when as the new president of Central YMCA College of Chicago, discriminations against minority groups were brought to my attention. As each one appeared the faculty and staff, in deep conviction, worked toward their elimination so that from 1936 until 1945 all students, regardless of race, color and creed, were admitted to the college on equal terms, and all activities, academic, physical and social, were open to every student alike. Competence was made the only criterion for faculty additions, and all were given complete freedom to teach and to learn.

By 1943 and 1944, with the war in progress, national trends began to affect the enrollments of this institution which admitted students only on the basis of ability. Minority groups found their way to this college where they had a chance and by the Fall of 1944 pressure began to come from the Board of Directors of the college and the Board of Managers, not only to reduce the number of Negro, Japanese and Jewish students, but to curtail discussion of controversial subjects within the classroom.

By the Spring of 1945 demands for reduction in the numbers of minority groups were formalized and I, as president of the institution, was asked to modify the policies of freedom of opportunity and academic freedom, or resign. On April 16, 1945, I sent the following message to the Board of Directors:

> Since coming to Central YMCA College as president on July 26, 1936, the faculty, the college staff, and I have stood together for academic freedom, and equal educational opportunities for everyone, regardless of race, color, or creed.

> During this past year the college board took action seeking to limit academic freedom, and members of the board, individually, tried to influence me to bring about a change in the entrance policy, limiting certain minority groups, particularly, Negroes.
> Realizing that the college cannot further develop under these auspices, and under these circumstances can no longer remain true to its pledge of academic freedom and equal educational opportunities for all, and being personally unwilling to compromise on these principles, I hereby submit my resignation as President of Central YMCA College.

On April 17, 1945, a ten dollar check was sent to the State of Illinois applying for a charter for Thomas Jefferson College, which within a week became Roosevelt College in honor of Franklin Delano Roosevelt who died on April 12, leaving us the heritage of the Four Freedoms.

Before funds were secured to make Roosevelt College more than a name 62 of the 79 members of the faculty of Central YMCA College resigned and the student body almost unanimously declared their intention to follow the faculty. This in reality made the creation of Roosevelt College possible for only through the dedication of a group of men to an ideal could our institution have been born and developed. Marshall Field, through the Field Foundation, and Edwin Embree, through the Rosenwald Fund, saw the need and the dream. Each one gave $75,000 to help make the dream a reality, enabling Roosevelt College to take its first breath after being born. In addition, thousands of public spirited citizens moved by the vision and the need rose up to add their moral and financial support to this new venture.

In so short a history there is not space to tell the story of the struggle to obtain that first building on Quincy and Wells, to get classrooms ready for opening on September 17, 1945, amid war-time restrictions, to recount the inconveniences tolerated by the faculty and by the 1,200 loyal students who registered that first Fall.

Roosevelt College did open on September 17, and was dedicated at the first Roosevelt College dinner on November 16, 1945, by Mrs. Franklin Delano Roosevelt with the words:

> "Roosevelt College of Chicago was founded to 'provide educational opportunities for persons of both sexes and of various races on equal terms' and to 'maintain a teaching faculty which is both free and responsible in the discovery and dissemination of truth.'

"I, Anna Eleanor Roosevelt, dedicate Roosevelt College to the fulfillment of these dynamic principles: to the enlightenment of the human spirit through the constant search for truth; and to the growth of the human spirit through knowledge, understanding and good will."

Roosevelt College was accredited by the North Central Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools after six months of operations. It grew each semester until bursting seams demanded larger quarters and so Chicago's old Auditorium Hotel at Congress and Michigan was purchased as its permanent home. Its faculty grew in numbers and stature until there are now 225 on its teaching staff. In its tenth year Roosevelt College became Roosevelt University and was accredited by the North Central Assocation for awarding of Master's degrees in eleven fields.

That Roosevelt University is meeting a need in the city of Chicago is evidenced by the large percentage of growth in enrollment each year for the past three years and by its present enrollment of 4,200 students. That it needs added material resources is evidenced by the underpaid superior faculty and the holes in the floor.

As graduates of Roosevelt you have experienced our strengths and our weaknesses. You also know of our strivings to help you fulfill your destiny.

Perhaps the best way to sum up this spot of history is to quote a sentence from a letter of a Roosevelt graduate, now a college professor: "Roosevelt University was a place where I was not afraid to be friendly."

Perhaps the best way to envision the future of Roosevelt University is to see the whole physical plant in terms of the newly restored Banqueting Hall (now the Rudolph Ganz Recital Hall), and to view the academic program in the light of ever deepening search for knowledge in an atmosphere of "Education for Freedom."

Dedication

The 1957 VANGUARD is humbly dedicated to Dr. Siegfried Marck and Dr. Irving Tenner, in sincere appreciation for the many benefits Roosevelt University has shared with them.

The printed page can do scant justice to their accomplishments as educators, nor can words capture the warmth of their personalities. Only in our hearts can we record their many personal gestures, and only in our lives can we hope to reflect in some measure the example of their dedicated lives.

The loss of these distinguished men was deeply felt by faculty and students alike. The men -- teachers and friends -- were loved and revered by all who knew and associated with them.

Dr. Irving Tenner, Professor of Accounting at Roosevelt University, died December 25, 1956, in Columbus Hospital.

Dr. Tenner taught at R. U. since 1946. He also taught at Northwestern University and the University of Chicago. Dr. Tenner was an independent accountant in Chicago, specialiaing in audits of municipalities.

An accountant, educator, and author, Dr. Tenner was a native of Romania, but came to the United States when he was only 13, and was educated here; he received his Ph. D. in Economics from Northwestern University, and his C. P. A. certificate from the State of Illinois.

Dr. Tenner was the author of Financial Administration of Municipal Utilities, Manual of Water Works Accounting, and Municipal and Governmental Accounting. The latter is a text used by Roosevelt University as well as by other colleges.

Dr. Siegfried Marck, Professor Emeritus of Philosophy at Roosevelt University was a member of the original faculty of Roosevelt College, when it was established in 1945.

He started his teaching career in 1917 in his native Germany, but was forced to flee the country when Hitler's regime seized control.

Dr. Marck taught in France prior to coming here in 1939. After being heard by Deans Hillman and Leys at a guest lecture he gave at the University of Chicago, he was offered a teaching position at the old Central YMCA College where he taught for the next six years.

Dr. Marck was co-author of the book: Germany - To Be or Not To Be; in addition, he wrote many other books and articles in both German and English.

Dr. Marck died February 16, 1957, in his home.

President's Message

To The Graduating Class of 1957

WHAT HAVE YOU LEARNED AT ROOSEVELT UNIVERSITY?

1. Have you learned that a little knowledge is a dangerous thing?
2. Have you learned that to pioneer you must first know where you are?
3. Have you learned that you cannot guess the value of people or objects or ideas by the packages they come in?
4. Have you learned that many minds are better than one in working toward the solution of a problem?
5. Have you learned that education for every man according to his capacities can enrich his life, his community and our world?
6. Have you learned that the difference between a mouse and a man is a cathedral?
7. Have you learned that there can be beauty in the spoken word?
8. Have you learned that ethical values and an attitude of public service are more to be valued than a mind full of unrelated facts and a pocket full of change?
9. Have you learned that there is more to an understanding of history than meets the eye?
10. Have you learned that love is the supreme outcome of real Knowledge?

TO THE EDITORS:

I wish to express my appreciation to the student editors of VANGUARD for the yeoman task they have done in a few short weeks. After a financially disasterous yearbook in 1947, there had been no inclination to tackle another until now. In fact, there had been no faculty or administrative encouragement to do so for fear of another loss.

The fact that the VANGUARD has come to life after all these years is entirely due to the students' insistence that they wanted one, plus their willingness to give the necessary hours of work to putting out a book.

My congratulations to you all for a job well done!

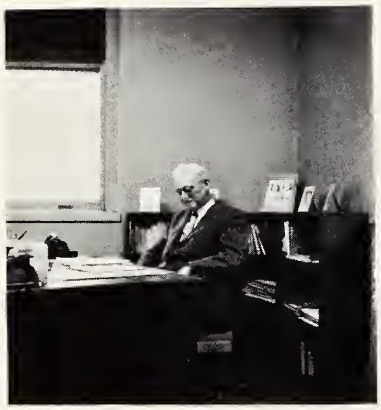
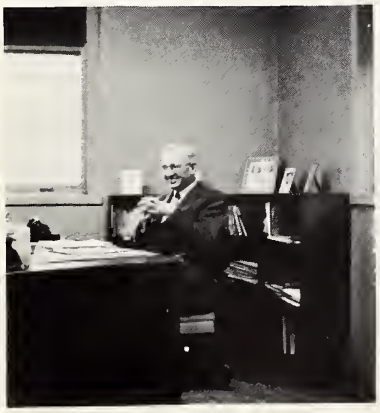
That's an original idea !



I'll get my pen.



Nice talking to you!

Our candid camera "just happened" to be around to catch these pictures of our beloved Dean of Student Services, Emery W. Balduf.

Because Dean Balduf is leaving us in June, the faculty and students want to take this opportunity to wish him only the very best of everything, always.

Dean Balduf, may you continue to guide and inspire young people for many years to come.

The once-renowned recital hall of Roosevelt University was dedicated to Rudolph Ganz in honor of his 80th birthday, February 24.

The hall, built by Adler and Sullivan at the end of the last century, was called the Banqueting Hall of the Auditorium Hotel and was k known as one of the most beautiful rooms in the country.

A contemporary sums up his long description of the room by saying: "There is every reason for believing that this Banqueting Hall is now, and will continue to be, for generations, a constant fountain of inspiration to all who love art. No one has ever visited it without feeling that Chicago was a much better place than he had believed."

Joseph Creanza
Director of
Chicago Musical College

Restoring the room as a recital hall and dedicating it to Rudolph Ganz on his 80th birthday was the idea of Joseph Creanza, Director of the Chicago Musical College of Roosevelt University. A year ago, the campaign was launched to secure the $75,000 needed for the project under the co-chairmanship of Mr. Theodore Steinway and Mrs. John Vl under the co-chairmanship of Mr. Theodore Steinway and Mrs. John V. Spachner. At the dedication, Mrs. Spachner reported that over $75,000 had been donated and pledged to the campaign. The goal of the drive was reached within a year.

Administration

A $1,825,000 capital gifts and stabilization campaign highlighted the 1956-57 administrative year.

The fund drive received its official kick-off at a dinner in the Palmer House, March 5, where approximately 1,000 business and civic leaders heard the appeal made by the University's Development Council and Board of Trustees.

Mayor Daley, one of the principal speakers at the dinner, which also marked the 120th anniversary of the incorporation of Chicago as a city, said that Roosevelt "came up the hard way...against odds that often seemed insurmountable."

He also predicted that Roosevelt will have to be ready to teach some 9,000 persons in the next three years, compared to the present 6,000 enrollment.

Wilson M. Compton, president, Council for Financial Aid to Education, Inc., New York, another of the guest speakers at the dinner, said, "Here in this capital of the American Middle West, we are in the very shadow of three great universities which deserved recognition throughout the nation and even around the world. Yet...institutions like Roosevelt University, more and more throughout recent years, have been opening up college opportunity to thousands to whom the doors heretofore had largely been closed. It is the great credit of this institution that it has ventured to be "different" -- different in its campus surroundings, different in its organization, different in the nature and scope of its appeal to the public..."

The University's Board of Trustees announced its own contribution as $100,000, to kick off the campaign. Another $272,000 in advance gifts and pledges from friends of the University was announced by Jerome Stone, speaking for the Board of Trustees.

One million dollars of the campaign money will go principally into rehabilitation of the University building, enlarged classroom and laboratory space, library facilities for the graduate division, subsidies for faculty research, increased faculty salaries and the establishment of a student center and recreational area.

The long-range goal of the Development Council is to raise a total of 16 million dollars to meet the future educational needs of the community served by Roosevelt University, as its contribution to the future growth and expansion of Chicago.

Roosevelt's 300 member Women's Scholarship Organization pledged to raise $100,000 in the next three years for education, at the organization's second annual meeting and tea, January 30. A goal of $40,000 was set for 1957.

Of this money, to be applied to the Roosevelt University Scholarship Fund, a total of approximately $11,800 has been raised since September 1, 1956.

The Association elected its officers and Board of Directors for the coming year, including Mrs. Jean Dago, Mrs. Allison Davis, Mrs. Sam Diamond, Mrs. Earl Dickerson, Mrs. William Gibbs, Mrs. Wendell Phillips, Mrs. George Prince, Mrs. John Sehgstacke, and Mrs. Katie Thompson, all members of the Board of Directors.

The Women's Scholarship Association, established in 1955, was organized the same year that Roosevelt University celebrated its tenth anniversary. Since that time, it has raised over $61,000, and has helped more than 200 men and women go to college.

ACTIVITIES

Organizations

Roosevelt's fraternity and sorority groups are living examples of the principles which have earned the ten year old University a respected position as one of the nation's most progressive colleges in the practice of Brotherhood and abolition of arbitrary discrimination.

A major portion of the University's social life is centered around its three fraternities -- Beta Sigma Tau, Praetorians, and Tau Delta Phi -- and single sorority, Phi Delta Rho.

Most of the proceeds from the organizations' year-round social calendar find their way to the coffers of the Roosevelt University Scholarship Fund, or some worthy outside charity.

TAU DELTA PHI

Lamda Epsilon Iota, local fraternity of Roosevelt University, completed affiliation with Tau Delta Phi national fraternity in an induction ceremony at the Sheraton-Blackstone Hotel, January 27, 1957.

The national fraternity was represented by Stanley Goodman, national secretary, Alan Freeman, regional vice-consul, and the consuls of the Loyola and Northwestern chapters of Tau Delta Phi.

Roosevelt University was represented by Nick Paster, director of student activities.

LEI is now known as Tau Pi chapter of Tau Delta Phi. Tau Pi represents the newest chapter in the history of the fraternity, which was established in 1910.

Highlight of the Tau Delt's social calendar will be their annual gala dance, "A Dream Come True," which represents co-operation on the part of almost every Midwestern University.

Proceeds from the sale of bids will contribute to the fight against nephrosis, the killer disease which claimed the life of a former Roosevelt student, Hershey Schneider.

"Future Horizons II" was the R.U. Praetorians' spotlight event of the year. The dance was presented in the Bal Tabarin Room of the Sherman Hotel, December 22, featuring music by Martin Roberts and his orchestra.

Sheila Vigat, Phi Gamma Tau candidate, was elected Queen of the highly successful all-campus affair.

The two runners-up selected with Miss Vigat as finalists after six days of very stiff competition, were Arlene Horn, WRBC candidate, and Wilma Wright, of Phi Delta Rho.

The judges were Jim Mills, popular Chicago disc-jockey who emceed the affair; Mr. Franklin, who represented Roosevelt University; and Mr. Noack, a representative of the Muscular Dystrophy Association, recipient of the dance proceeds.

In addition to a full round of social activities, the Praetorians were active in intra-mural sports throughout the year.

Beta Sigma Tau presented its headline event, the annual "Blue and Crimson" ball, in the Bal Tabarin Room of the Sherman Hotel, February 8, with music by Lou Breese and his orchestra.

The fraternity also conducted several visits to fellow chapters in out-of-town universities, and participated actively in intramural sports.

In addition to the social life and camaraderie it affords, Beta Sigma Tau features a unique study program by which fraternity inductees are initiated also into the most successful techniques for efficient study. Thus equipped, Beta Sigs are able to turn the semester break into a final fling while most students sweat it out in the last-minute cram for exams.

ALPHA DELTA SIGMA

Roosevelt's advertising students may associate with and learn first-hand from men in the profession. This valuable opportunity is offered by the George D. Gaw chapter of Alpha Delta Sigma national professional advertising fraternity for men.

Highlighting the group's activities was a college advertising contest conducted in conjunction with Playboy Magazine among the active chapters of Alpha Delta Sigma.

Member chapters of ADS composed an advertisement exemplifying the impact and acceptance of Playboy at their particular college level, thus providing an opportunity for students to gain valuable experience in the preparation of effective advertising.

PHI DELTA RHO

Phi Delta Rho, Roosevelt's sole social sorority, endeavors to develop school spirit among its members and to provide them with opportunities to share good times together. The girls work in conjunction with other organizations here at RU to promote social life and rah-rah spirit among the students.

Fall semester events included a dinner dance, Halloween party, card party, and pajama party.

In addition to providing good times, the program of social events enables the sorority to raise funds for the American Cancer Society, of which it is an affiliate.

Through their "Queen for a Night" dance, highlight of the sorority's social year, the girls hope to donate several hundred dollars to combat the dread disease.

Phi Delta Rho's first undertaking this fall was a huge membership drive. For the first time in its history, the sorority opened its doors to all university girls interested in joining. A Rush Tea was held enabling all potential members to get together and meet one another.

An outstanding achievement of the sorority last semester was its work on the scholarship bazaar. Through the combined efforts of all the girls on the book booth, the sorority raised more than $330. for scholarships.

THE EDITORS SPEAK

The task of producing the 1957 VANGUARD was undertaken by us as an answer to the demands of our fellow students. It started as an idea and matured to a reality on a limited budget, coupled witn many prayers, hard work, and many disappointments.

The day has finally come --- the VANGUARD is completed, and as you turn these pages, we sincerely hope that many fond memories of the good times and close friends you have had at Roosevelt will be recalled.

One or two people alone cannot put out a yearbook, and we feel that we must give special thanks to Nick Paster, who went along with us all the way -- encouraging and advising whenever we need him; and to the men of A. D. S. Advertising Agency whose help and co-operation were priceless to us.

It is our hope that this book will be an inspiration to the students of the future classes at Roosevelt University, to continue our pioneering, and each year improve the book until it reaches the top among University Annuals.

THE VANGUARD

The 1957 VANGUARD, spearheaded by co-editors Adrienne Feinberg and Mrs. Jeannine Best, is presented to you as the second yearbook publication in Roosevelt's ten-year history.

The Vanguard, commemorating the opening year of Roosevelt's second decade is designed to launch a continuing series of University annuals.

STUDENT COUNCIL

Roosevelt has an ideal setup for democracy in practice - balanced government. Through the elected student council, representing the student body and through joint faculty-student boards the students of Roosevelt exercise a powerful voice in campus affairs. Working within a framework of general policies laid down by the School the Council advised by faculty representatives, directs such student activities as publications, organizations, and, to some extent, social events.

Besides its activities as the students chief co-ordinating organization the council, Robert Atwood presiding launched a full-scale orientation drive, one of the most successful in Roosevelt's ten-year history in welcoming the Spring Class of 1957. The council, with the co-operation of students, faculty and administrative personnel, set up the program to answer the critical need for a re-evaluation of the University's orientation procedures.

Congressmen in the making!

MUSIC SERIES

Studs Terkel popular Chicago folksong commentator, Big Bill Broonzy, blues singer, and Gerry Armstrong, Elizabethan balladeer, shared the spotlight December 13, in a smash show of popular folk tunes, I COME FOR TO SING, keynoting a four-part series of entertaining and educational musical programs featuring well-known performers and lecturers presented by Roosevelt's student activities board and alumni association.

OPERA IN THE MAKING was the title of the second installment of the series, January 17. Erwin Jospe, director of the Opera Workshop, assistant conductor, Lyric Opera of Chicago, and musical director, Anshe Emmet Synagogue, presented scenes from the great operas, with artists from the Roosevelt University Opera Workshop.

The theme swung to JAZZ: AMERICA'S HEARTBEAT for the third production, February 12. Joe Segal, "Metronome" columnist, RU Jazz Club emcee and Torch jazz columnist opened the festivities as commentator, with Cy Touff, bass trumpeter (Woody Herman), leading off. Featured were Ira Schulman, clarinet and saxaphone (Charlie Spivak); Bob Roberts, piano, banjo, guitar (instructor, Rizzo School of Music); Billy Gaeto, drums and percussion (Muggsy Spamier); Israel Crosby bass (the Ahmad Jamal Trio at the London House).

Classical music was the theme of the series' final chorus, as members of the Chicago Symphony Orchestra with George A. Kuyper manager, presented SYMPHONY SCRAPBOOK, on March 12, 1957.

STUDENT ZIONIST ORGANIZATION

Roosevelt's Student Zionist Organization, through the medium of lectures and debate groups, interprets and recruites support for the projects of World Zionism. The group operates in conjunction with the IZFA which stresses education, fund-raising and political activity in its projects, with a side emphasis on social events.

WRBC

This student workshop caters to those interested in the many and varied aspects of radio work, from writing and producing to acting in radio productions.

The organization instituted an overall rebuilding program during the past year completing a high fidelity broadcasting system with the installation of a new hi-fi coaxial speaker in the Michigan Avenue lounge.

WRBC co-operated with Northwestern University and the University of Chicago to installate an intercollegiate radio network, opening its operations with the exchange of tape-recorded programs.

THE INTERCLUB COUNCIL

The Interclub Council promotes better understanding between the organizations at Roosevelt, by establishing a forum where they can meet to help each other solve problems and questions common to the group, through discussion.

THE TORCH

After a struggle of several years to combat the transiency of the student newspaper staff which had resulted in a virtual one-man operation of the paper the Torch succeeded at mid-year in establishing a compact editorial board and staff which is expected to perpetuate itself from year to year.

Leroy Lilly, Jr. succeeded Sheldon Treshansky early in the semester as editor-in-chief of the Torch.

Roosevelt's Metropolitan Players, directed by Miss Anna Helen Reuter, delighted audiences this year with their renditions of "The Grass Harp," "Dark of the Moon" and "Medea."

Five RU students made their debuts in the Met Players' season opener, a "theater-in-the-round" production of Truman Capote's "The Grass Harp." This comedy fantasy shows how the pure in heart, like the meek, inherit the earth through a greater capacity for love than most aggressive people. All the common impulses of the world are enlisted against a trio who find sanctuary in a tree house. The penetrating character portrayal, the rich, comic dialogue, and a final scene written with great tenderness make "The Grass Harp" an original, disarming, gifted piece of writing.

Witches, conjour people, a fire-and-brimstone preacher, and an odd assortment of "just plain humans" went to mke up a delightful rendition by the Met Players of William Berney and Howard Richardson's drama, "Dark of the Moon."

There is singing, dancing, and comedy in this unusual drama which revolves around the love of a "witch boy" for a human girl and has as its setting the "Smoking Mountains." The down-to-earth dialogue of these common mountain people is flavored with much humor, and at the same time each scene holds tremendous dramatic impact.

Robinson Jeffers' version of Euripedes' famed "Medea" was the third featured performance this season.

Unlike most university theater groups, which limit active participation in drama productions to speech majors, the Metropolitan Players is open to all full-time university students.

Athletics

While the autumn leaves are gently falling to earth, the Grant Park gridirons can be heard to resound to the thump of bodies and cleats, as the Roosevelt Intramural sports program gets underway with the football tournament. As many as ten and twelve fraternities, clubs and independent teams will be engaged in the jousting every Sunday afternoon.

By mid-November the cleats have been hung up and the population is ready to concentrate upon the fall table tennis tourney and bowling.

As February rolls around Olivet Institute will be overflowing with Rooseveltians getting ready for the basketball tilts. Praetorians, Beta Sigs, Tau Delts and numerous independent teams can be seen sharpening up their eyes, perfecting ball handling techniques, and smoothing out plays

By mid-March the horse-hides will be put away, and preparations for the Spring ping-pong joust will get underway, as well as bowling which is actually carried over from the fall, and softball. Softball is one of the bigger entries, usually featuring as many as sixteen teams in two separate leagues, with regular playoffs.

Because Roosevelt lacks the facilities to participate, on a large scale, in intercollegiate sports it concentrates its efforts at the intra-mural level, with quite a bit of success. On Letterman's Day, in May, trophies are presented to the winning teams of the various tournaments, and awards are given to outstanding players of the year in the various sports. At this time too, letters are presented to athletes who played on the school's Basketball, Golf, and Tennis teams.
